Three men want Catarina de la Alvarado for very different reasons. Border Patrol Officer Logan Dell is sweet poison; fabulously wealthy Alfonso Carreras could gift her with her own island; reckless Case Becker would rob her of her soul.

Catarina’s aspirations are far above her status as a Mexican migrant worker, but she has the smarts and the will to win. She has plans of her own and what she wants requires that she belong to no man.

Set in the steamy tropical lands where Texas and Mexico become one, love, power and obsession suck them all deep into the Yucatan where their ultimate fates depend on a storm, a murder and a lie.

Susan LeMiles grew up in San Benito, Texas. She knows that The Rio Grande Valley is neither Texas nor Mexico, but a land of its own with its own history, its own people. The power of stories is written into human DNA and while traveling the United States as a public speaker, Susan made storytelling a key part of her presentations. Audiences continually gave her reviews that requested “More stories. More stories!”

What you will see in this surprising, suspenseful novel is proof of her belief that love heals, we are all one on the earth, and that what lies within us is more powerful than any challenge we face.
